Excerpt: . case of cobra-bite artificial respiration might prolong the interval of resistance offered by the victim s organism to the action of the poison. Further investigation showed that in rabbits a dose of poison which ordinarily proved fatal in 25 minutes required nine hours for the fatal effect when the animal had been treated by artifical respiration. He therefore recommended that artificial respiration should be employed immediately after a person had been bitten, and that antivenomous serum should be injected as soon as possible. The serum required an hour or two for the production of its effect, and the artificial respiration ought to be continued without interruption during the whole time.--Lancet, July 16, 1910. Lactic Acid Bacilli In Gonorrhea.--Watson (British Medical Journal, 1910, No. IV) advocates the use of sour milk injection in gonorrhea in woman. He has obtained excellent results in a number of cases. We wish to call special attention to the announcement of the Census Bureau of the issue of a physician s pocket reference to the international list of causes of death. The red tape involved in the careful reporting of vital statistics is without question irksome to the individual practitioner and too often we fear he fails to appreciate the importance of it. The Census Bureau is to be commended in their policy of making the reporting of these statistics as easy as possible. At best mortality returns must be full of errors as they depend upon the often...
